Pell Defends New Deal With Argument Nation Benefits Under Policy

Herbert C. Pell, Democratic State Chairman, Admits Mistakes and Wastes But Says All Better Off Under Roosevelt.

CASINO SPEAKER

Local Residents Offer Personal Opinions at Stone Ridge Forum Friday Evening.

Stone Ridge, Aug. 8.—Over 200 persons of mixed political faith heard an address last evening by Herbert C. Pell, former Congressman and Democratic state chairman, in which he defended the much-criticized phases of the New Deal with admissions of mistakes and waste, but with a firm conviction that under President Roosevelt the nation was far better off than it had been before he took office.

For nearly an hour Mr. Pell spoke to the largest single audience the Casino Summer Forum has ever had in its two years of existence, and for nearly another equal period of time answered many questions, mostly from Republicans.

A major point of Mr. Pell's attack was concentrated on administrations from 1929 to the crash of 1929 and he blamed unscrupulous business executives for its cause. He advocated that the American Liberty League would attempt to have similar conditions in the future by chicanery.

The unconstitutionally slaughtered little ones were the guest speaker agreed that they never should have been butchered.

Hits at Landon

Of Governor Landon's ability to balance the Kansas budget Mr. Pell declared that he used 75 per cent of federal money for relief in that state and charged that G. O. P. supporters were boasting that he would balance the national budget in the same manner, and that because money could not be obtained from Europe, Asia or Africa for this purpose, Mr. Landon would have to get it from the moon.

In answer to a question by H. H. Fleming, Kingston attorney, that the Democrats who have always championed state rights were now centering all governmental activities in Washington, Mr. Pell held that with change of times and increased interstate business it was necessary for federal regulations. However, he agreed that regarding local business there should be local regulations. Ross Osterhout, Democratic supervisor of Marlborough, asked if Mr. Landon had favored the now defunct Agricultural Adjustment Act; the reply was that he probably had.

Heiselman's Query

Mayor C. J. Heiselman of Kingston queried as to the constant large number of unemployed. Mr. Pell declared that in spite of recovery this number could not yet be completely absorbed in channels of private business and that the population had increased since the beginning of the depression. Mr. Heiselman then asked if as long as the nation operated under a democratic form of government by laws was it right for a President to act irrespective of constitutional. Mr. Pell asserted that it was not, and hoped we would never have a chief executive who would.

Jay Terry Speaks

Jay Terry, president of the Kingston Teachers' Association, asked, in view of the speaker's declaration that the country was on its feet today, if the country could be prosperous if business were not prosperous, and added that under Mr. Roosevelt business was so severely taxed that it could not expand in fear of even greater taxation. Mr. Pell referred Mr. Terry's question to the financial statistics of the New York Times and annually offered a wager that at least 75 per cent of the business establishments today were showing increased profits over last year.

As to the national debt, the speaker pointed his audience that there were many great public works that had been done and that the debt had been no revolution. "The debt was the only alternative," he added.

Hutton's View

George V. Hutton, of Kingston, spoke of the high standard of living in this country made possible by the great fortunes by graft but denied that it did give the American people a luxurious life. Mr. Pell agreed that it had been a revolution, but added that it was the only alternative.

Among other political figures in the audience were Judge Bernard A. Callahan, Democratic county chairman; John Burckwin, Democratic candidate for the state assembly; and Theodore O. Brown, of Enos.

Mayor Sturge, Jr., director of the Forum, announced that George Osterhout would be the guest speaker at the next talk, on Friday, August 21.

Zioncheck Plunges to Death Before His Bride from Fifth Floor of Building in Seattle

Spectacular Congressman, Whose Madcap Capers Blazed His Name Across Nation From New Years Until June, is Said to Have Leaped From Window in His Campaign Headquarters—Wife Was Sitting in Car Waiting For Him When Representative Hurdled to Death a Few Feet in Front of Her—Inquest on Friday—Full Congressional Honors For Zioncheck.

PLUNGES TO DEATH

MARION ZIONCHECK

Seattle, Aug. 8 (AP)—Spectacular to the last, Rep. Marion A. Zioncheck tore away from a relative late yesterday, dived head first through a fifth-story window and died before the eyes of his pretty bride of four months.

"I missed him by a foot," said Zioncheck's brother-in-law, William Nadeau, who tried to prevent the plunge after finding the eccentric Congressman penning an incoherent note in his reelection campaign headquarters.

Thus ended the life of the 34-year-old Washington state Congressman whose unpredictable capers in the national capital kept his name on front pages for weeks, culminating at last in his detention in a Maryland home for mental cases.

Hatless and coatless, Zioncheck turned as he fell, missed hitting a pedestrian by inches and struck the curbing only a few feet from his bride who was waiting for him in a motor car.

Coroner Otto Mittelstadt said the Congressman apparently committed suicide. An inquest was set for Friday.

Nadeau blamed himself for not stopping his brother-in-law. He said a psychiatrist, Dr. Edward D. Hoodemaker, had warned the family to keep a close watch on him to prevent a suicide.

He said the Congressman prepared to leave the office, he whirled suddenly, flung off his coat, ran and dived through an open window.

Nearly Hit Broker

In his plunge, Zioncheck nearly hit W. H. McFarlane, a broker, who stumbled over him.

When Zioncheck struck, his wife jumped from the automobile, ran to him, became hysterical. She was taken to a hospital from which she went home a few hours later.

Nadeau had gone to the office to get Zioncheck to attend a postal employees' dinner.

"When I got into the office I found the door locked and Marion didn't answer when I rapped," he said. "So I got the janitor to let me in."

"Marion was sitting at his desk with his coat off, writing a note when I walked in. Something, I don't know what, impelled me to look over his shoulder and read what he was writing."

"As soon as I saw the first line I knew it was a 'phony'."

"For God's sake forget that stuff," I told him. "Let's go down stairs."

"I grabbed him and helped him on with his coat and started to walk out of the office with him. But I noticed that he didn't have a hat with him and asked him if he didn't have one. He said he did and pointed over to a shelf, so I started to get it for him. At that he broke away and ran for the window in the other room."

"He's going to do it," I thought. And started after him. But he didn't wait even to see if the window was opened. He just jumped and I couldn't reach him."

Coroner Reveals Note

The coroner said the following note was found:

"My only hope in life was to improve the condition of an unfair economic system that held no promise to those that all the wealth or even a decent chance to survive let alone live."

The congressman's mother, whose wish was said to have caused him to change his mind and run for reelection, has been ill lately and she was not immediately notified of his death.

The coroner remarked that the note was not coherent. It was written on Zioncheck's house of representative stationery.

Zioncheck had the reputation of an advanced liberal when he was elected to represent Washington state's first district in 1932. He was re-elected two years ago.

His life had been full of sensational episodes since last New Year's Eve, when he plunged in a number of telephone lines of his apartment house switchboard. His antics were discussed several weeks ago when he escaped from a Maryland institution for mental cases by climbing a seven-foot fence.

Family Was Advised

The coroner said Nadeau told him a psychiatrist had advised the family to keep a close watch on Zioncheck as he seemed "moody and dependent over publicity he had received."

Married last April to Ralph Nis, a Tarrant, Tex., girl working in Washington, Zioncheck kept his name on the front pages of newspapers through one caper after another.

The couple's honeymoon in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands was a lively one. Back in the capital he was arrested for speeding because

Roosevelt and Landon To Confer on Drouth in Month With Governors

Conference Will Probably Be Held in Iowa; Democratic "Rebels" at Detroit Make Sharp Distinctions About Landon.

KNOX ON TOUR

Col. Knox Swings Today Through Nation; Landon's Tour of Platform Appearances.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—A drouth parley which may find President Roosevelt seated across the conference table from Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was virtually assured today as the President settled down for his last work day before returning to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed late yesterday that he would invite Governor Landon along with the governors of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri to a conference, probably in Iowa early next month, to discuss state and federal cooperation in combating effects of the drouth.

Advised in Topeka of the president's plan, the Republican presidential candidate said:

"If there is any meeting anywhere at any time of benefit to Kansas, I will attend as governor of Kansas."

The conference will be one of four Mr. Roosevelt expects to arrange on a tour of drouth states beginning August 25 or 26, and ending near September 10.

The schedule, with dates and places still not definitely fixed, will bring the chief executive first to the western Dakotas, where he will confer with the governors of the Dakotas, Wyoming and Montana. He said he wanted to see the worst of the drouth region first.

Later Tour

He will move later into Minnesota and Wisconsin and talk with the governors, turn south probably into Iowa, then swing over into corn belt states east of the Mississippi for a talk with the governors of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky.

Later next week, he expects to inspect flood regions of northern and western Pennsylvania and southern New York, and then return here for a week.

He wants to be in Hyde Park on August 17 to help celebrate the birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

With the governors of the states damaged by sun and blistering winds, the president indicated he would discuss three angles of the drouth problem: immediate relief, provisions for the winter and spring, and the longrange approach.

Holding down today's calling list to two appointments, he planned to clear it in the morning, dispose of minor government business in the afternoon, and attend an old-fashioned clam bake at the estate of Secretary Morgenthau in nearby Fishkill in the evening.

Sunday night he will entrain for Washington.

The first morning conference was arranged with spokesmen for the first voters. Members of the White House staff said the organization was attempting to persuade persons who have come of voting age since the last election to cast Democratic ballots in November.

James Townsend of Poughkeepsie, chairman of the Dutchess county Democratic committee, was the other scheduled visitor.

Sharp Distinctions

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP)—A meeting of Democrats opposed to the New Deal drew a sharp distinction today between supporting Governor Landon and opposing President Roosevelt, and left the formulation of exact policies to a committee on resolutions.

While, individually, many members of the gathering, led by men once high in Democratic party circles said they favored an outright Landon endorsement, such a move met with determined opposition from the south.

A consequent proposal intended to compromise these two attitudes was that the conference should oppose the reelection of President Roosevelt, leaving the question of a Landon endorsement to its members individually.

Nazis Insist Upon Soviet Neutrality Before European Policy Can Become Effective

REBELS ON THE FIRING LINE!

Nazis Also Attach Reservations to Character and Scope of Their Neutrality; Emphasize Demand for Reparations.

LEFTIST GAINS

Capture of All Towns Around Hueco, Advances in Guadarrama Mountains Reported.

Berlin, Aug. 8 (AP)—The neutrality of Soviet Russia in Spain's civil war must be assured before a general European non-intervention policy, such as is proposed by the French, can be effective, the foreign office stated today.

The Nazi government agreed "in principle" with the French proposal that the rest of Europe keep its fingers out of the Spanish situation, but attached reservations as to the character and scope of its neutrality.

Fully aware of the catastrophic potentialities of the Spanish imbroglio, Germany is cooperating with other European powers in an effort to evolve a really effective neutrality plan, the foreign office made plain.

Nevertheless, the Hitler government made no secret of the fact it intended to protect its nationals by force of arms if necessary.

Emphasized Demands

It emphasized its demands on Madrid and Barcelona for reparation for loss of life and property in Spain with a display of naval force around the coast of the Spanish peninsula. Eight German warships lay in Spanish waters to emphasize the determination of the Wilhelmstrasse to brook no further interference with the rights of German citizens in the war-torn infant republic.

Andre Francois-Poncet, the French ambassador to Berlin, who twice this week had visited Konstantin Von Neurath, was assured by the German foreign minister that this country welcomed in principle the idea of neutrality agreements if they could be made collective.

In the first conversation with Von Neurath the ambassador merely asked the views of the German government on the neutrality agreement. On a second visit he submitted specific proposals for carrying out neutrality—such as embargoes on arms and airplanes.

Von Neurath's Reply

Von Neurath replied the German government welcomed the ideas and would give them most careful study.

A report that former King Alfonso of Spain was coming to Berlin for a conference with Chancellor Hitler, or that he planned to talk with both Hitler and Count Ciano, the Italian minister of foreign affairs, was described here as "foolish."

A hint of German strong-arm methods to obtain satisfaction for alleged mistreatment of German nationals in Spain was contained in a statement published by the Kreuz-Zeitung which said:

"If the Madrid and Barcelona governments are no longer able to protect the lives and property of foreigners, they need not be surprised if official recognition is withdrawn from them and if other nations adopt a joint scheme of protection for their subjects against Bolshevik fury."

(The British press in London suggested formation of an international patrol of warships from nations accepting the neutrality agreement.)

Personal Conferences

Personal conferences from Chancellor Adolf Hitler were sent to the families of German victims in the Spanish civil war, three of whom were asserted to be members of the Nazi Labor Front.

(These three, with one other young German, were reported executed by Lefist at Barcelona after a summary court-martial. Three other Germans have been reported killed since the outbreak of the Fascist rebellion.)

The foreign department of the Nazi party ordered a fortnight's mourning.

Renewed press comment on the Spanish situation virtually pushed news of the Olympic Games off the front pages of German newspapers.

"We demand satisfaction," was the caption of an editorial in the newspaper Kreuz-Zeitung. Commenting on the situation the paper declared:

"Reports from Spain about the unrelenting and the red horde clearly indicate Spain is in the midst of a Bolshevik revolution."

3 States to Contest Taxes From Huge Col. Green Estate

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Three states appeared ready today to contest for inheritance taxes from the estimated $80,000,000 estate of Col. Edward H. R. Green as disposition of his vast fortune seemed to hinge on validity of his pre-nuptial will made in 1908.

Tax authorities of New York, Texas and Massachusetts, where Colonel Green lived and owned property, were reported preparing claims to inheritance levies. He also held property in Florida.

His estate, partly inherited from his mother, Betty Green, and amassed principally through railroad earnings, would go to his sister, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks of New York, under the 1908 will filed in surrogate's court at Port Henry, N. Y.

The document made no provision for his widow, Mrs. Mabel H. Green, whom Colonel Green married in 1917. At that time the inheritor announced he had given his bride $500,000 in cash and $125,000 in liberty bonds as a wedding present.

Hetty Green, ranked among the world's richest women when she died in 1916, was made sole beneficiary of her son under the 1908 will, drawn in Texas.

There was an additional provision, however:

"... should she not be living at the time of my death, then I leave, bequeath and devise all my estate, both real and personal, to my sister, Hetty Sylvia A. H. Green, of Beloxia Falls, N. Y."

The sister, now Mrs. Wilks, offered the will for probate after Colonel Green's widow, on the theory that her husband had died intestate, had applied for letters of administration to Kaufman, Tex.

Texas lawyers offered the opinion yesterday that the document would be valid there, except that the widow would be entitled to share in all property acquired after marriage.

A hearing is scheduled in Kaufman Monday on Mrs. Green's petition for administration.

Deputy Tax Collector William F. Stephens of New York state said he believed New York had the best claim to inheritance taxes.

Massachusetts attorneys, where Mrs. Green lives at Round Hill, said a pre-nuptial will was void in that state unless it was made in contemplation of marriage.

The will will come up for formal probate at Port Henry September 8, and both Mrs. Wilks and Mrs. Green would have to be present.

Greene's Need Discipline

Athens, Aug. 8 (AP)—Premier John Metaxas, military dictator of Greece, said today "the whole Greek people must be disciplined." "Former popular liberties may be reinstated," the premier declared, "when the social order is absolutely secure and when there is no longer danger from subversive elements."

The most recent European dictator to ascend to power was a wide-winged collar and a dark necktie similar to those worn by Premier Mussolini of Italy.

U.S. Relay Runners Capture Heat Today At Berlin Trials

Berlin, Aug. 8 (AP)—Equalling the world record of 40 seconds flat, the United States quartet of Jesse Owens, Ralph Metcalfe, Foy Draper and Frank Wykoff captured their heat in the Olympic 400-meter relay trials today, defeating the Italian team by 15 meters.

The universal standard was made by Uncle Sam's 1932 baton-passers at Los Angeles with the veteran Wykoff, three-time Olympian from Carpenters, Calif., also running the anchor leg as he did previously in 1928 at Amsterdam.

The other members of the record-team four years ago were Robert Kiesel of Berkeley, Calif.; Emmett Topping of New Orleans, and Hector Dyer of Los Angeles, who ran in that order in front of Wykoff.

Returning to competition after three days absence since he achieved his third Olympic conquest, Owens started perfectly and gave the United States a five-meter margin which his mates steadily increased.

The quartet, which was not decided until this morning after considerable controversy within the American camp, handled the baton perfectly as they outlasted five rivals.

Showing surprising form and speed, the Italian foursome beat Japan and South Africa decisively, gaining the second qualifying place for tomorrow's finals.

Holland's crack sprinters captured the second heat by ten meters over the Argentines, who by beating Hungary and Great Britain for the second qualifying place. The Dutch were clocked in 41.3 seconds, and three-tenths seconds slower than the Americans.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler arrived just in time to watch the Germans capture the third and last relay trial in a sensational finish which saw Gerd Hornberger wipe out a two-meter deficit on the home stretch and beat Canada's anchor man, Howie McPherson, by a scant two feet. The Germans were timed in 41.1 seconds.

The American women's 400-meter relay team, Harriet Bland, St. Louis, Annette Rogers and Betty Robinson of Chicago, and Helen Stephens of Fulton, Mo., beat Canada by eight meters in the first heat as they were clocked in 47.1 seconds.

The red-headed Miss Bland got off to a great start and gained a four-meter margin which Miss Rogers and Miss Stephens safeguarded and Miss Stephens, Olympic 100-meter champion, doubled in the stretch.

The German girls broke the world record in the second heat with a performance in 56.4 seconds, one-tenth of a second under their own mark set earlier this year. The British team was second, trailing by eight meters.

Volmar Joo-Hoik of Finland became the 11th Olympiad's first repeating champion as he won the 2,000-meter steeplechase final, Harold Manning of Wichita, Kans., the American favorite, ran fifth.

On Wheels Carnival To Be Staged by the City's Playgrounds

What Supervisor Stuart Parks terms an "On Wheels Carnival" will be staged by the children of the city's playgrounds on Thursday afternoon, August 13, on Fair street, in the block between Henry and Franklin streets, which will be closed to traffic that afternoon.

The program as arranged by Supervisor Parks, will consist of all sorts of races between the children such as scooter races, pushmovers, roller skates, doll carriages, bicycles and chariots. Many of the machines to be used in the race are being made by the boys themselves.

This is the first that such a carnival has ever been held in Kingston and the various playgrounds are vying with each other to see who will turn out the most champions in the various events on the sports program.

The carnival is free to the general public who are invited to attend and enjoy the sports.

HENRY R. DEWITT ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

The host of friends of Henry R. Dewitt, for many years the popular clerk of the Board of Supervisors, who has been ill for six weeks past, suffering from a gastric trouble, will be pleased to learn that he is on the road to recovery. A letter received from Mrs. Dewitt stated that observation at the hospital and an X-ray examination disclosed nothing serious and that with proper diet and care he was expected to come around in good shape in a short time. The letter was in response to a card and some Landon sunflowers sent by friends in the county treasurer's office.

The sunflowers especially are reported to have had a most cheering effect upon the patient. The Dewitts are now making their home in Wakefield, Mass.

Own Law Is Upheld

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—New state's "run in auto" law came through its first court test with flying colors today, Supreme Court Justice Francis Bergan ruling that it did not violate the "due process" clause of the federal and state constitutions.

The law, passed by the 1934 legislature, makes the discovery of an unlicensed driver in an automobile presumptive evidence of possession against all occupants. Justice Bergan gave his opinion in connection with a habeas corpus proceeding brought in behalf of James Brown and James Latham, negroes of Western Union, N. C. They are held under indictment for possession of an auto found by Albany police in a stolen automobile in which they were riding. Four others in the car pleaded guilty and were given suspended sentences.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE E. JAGGER

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Gains of fractions to more than 2 points were widely scattered through the stock market in the final minutes of a rather busy week-end session today.

Most issues held under best levels of the renewed advance, although buying tapered in the second hour. The close was firm, turnover approximated 750,000 shares.

Allied Chemical expanded its gains sharply. Can shares rallied from a break earlier in the week when drought losses raised prospects of a smaller pack of some farm products. Both American Can and Continental sold up more than a point at one time.

Strong spots included Western Union, Gulf States Steel, United States Steel, North American, Johns-Manville and Sears Roebuck.

Free Diphtheria Clinic on Monday

Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, in an effort to control diphtheria in the city will hold another in the series of free clinics at the city hall on Monday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock where parents may bring their children to have them immunized against diphtheria. Parents who desire to have their children vaccinated may also have it done at the same time. Since the inauguration of free clinics for the prevention of diphtheria in the city some years ago the disease has been controlled and but few cases are reported here during the year.

Immigrants Held Aid to the Progress of America

Yankee ingenuity, American initiative and the enterprise of natives in many states have been celebrated in fiction and anecdote for decades. But much of that quality vaguely defined as "the American spirit" has been evolved by grafting an American environment on foreign-born individuals, asserts a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

To the credit of many immigrants to the United States must go dozens of achievements which have contributed enormously to advances along cultural and economic lines. It is not generally known that foreign-born or second generation Americans were responsible in the United States for:

The first sugar refinery, which was built and successfully operated in New Orleans in 1791 by Antonio Mendez, a Spanish-American.

The first type foundry, which was established in Germantown, Pa., in 1771 by Christopher Sauer, son of a German immigrant.

The first vineyard, which was cultivated on 630 acres of ground outside Lexington, Ky., in 1788 by James Dufosse, a Swiss immigrant.

The first water pumping station for municipal use, which was built in Bethlehem, Pa., in 1755 by Hans Christopher Christiansen, a Swedish-American.

The first factory for the manufacture of brick roofing tile, which was built in 1735 in Montgomery County, Pa., by a German immigrant named Huster.

The first glass to be made in America, which was blown by Polish and German workers imported into the Jamestown colony in Virginia in 1608 to make glass beads for trading with the Indians.

Many Throno Pretenders

Throughout the British Empire there are numerous small groups of Jacobites who, believing in the 248-year-old claim to the throne by the descendants of the exiled Stuarts, regularly meet and toast "the rightful king." Undoubtedly each group has its own particular pretenders, as a list of them contains more than 500 names, including those of a Glasgow grocer and a Hereford policeman.—Collier's Weekly.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 8 (AP)—Six persons were reported today to have been named in indictments ordered prepared under the Lindbergh kidnapping law by the Federal Grand Jury investigating the abduction of Paul H. Wendel. The Grand Jury adjourned late yesterday, because of the absence of witnesses, until September 14, leaving open its probe into the charges of the former Trenton attorney that he was kidnapped and tortured until he made a false confession that he abducted the Lindbergh baby.

YOU CAN LEARN TO WRITE

Virginia Tells Her First Story

Her own story, in print, illustrated, in a popular magazine. No wonder Virginia's thrilled. And Ted and Berenice really are impressed!

A story of the adventures of a young bus driver—Ted's cousin in real life. Who would have guessed that Virginia, listening to him tell of his exploits, was spinning a yarn about them!

She put them down in a note-book. Then let her imagination run. As scenes were built up in her mind, she groped about for words to paint them. With dictionary and synonym book she widened her vocabulary. Every day for two hours she wrote about something, not waiting for "the right word."

Months later she would pull out her manuscript and read it. What a lot she had learned in the meantime! She trimmed, rewrote, improved. Got the feel of writing just by doing it, as all writers must.

That way she found her own natural style. She rejected subjects not fitted to fit, or too far from her own experience. She often made lists of words—one list suggesting "eager," for instance; another "melancholy." Words began to come easier. She watched out for mixed metaphors such as "Her life was a rocky road, hard to be through. 'Hard to travel,' Virginia would write.

Just such tips as these, with practical plans for daily progress, are given in our 48-page booklet, SELF-INSTRUCTION IN WRITING. The work of a noted teacher who has guided hundreds of beginners to success. Develop your own hidden talent. Clear, practical, fascinating.

Send 15c for our booklet, SELF-INSTRUCTION IN WRITING to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 109 West 13th street, New York, N. Y. Roosevelt, Landon To Confer on Drouth visitation Republican National Chairman John D. Hamilton issued in a speech at Cour D'Alene, Idaho, to "that great group of Democrats who are leaving Mr. Roosevelt to enter the Republican ranks."

James A. Reed, former Democratic senator from Missouri, after a meeting of the resolutions committee which lasted long after midnight said all present were emphatically opposed to the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt but felt that methods of opposing him should be left to "the discretion of the Democrats here and the Democrats in the States."

Reed was one of several men, once prominent in the high councils of the party, who furnished the leadership of the meeting. Others were Joseph B. Ely, former Democratic governor of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson; Henry Breckinridge, who opposed President Roosevelt in several state presidential primaries and John Henry Kirby, Texas Democrat.

The appointment of a committee to put the purposes of the meeting into writing followed a proposal that the conference endorse Governor Landon, advanced by Ely and quickly opposed by members of the gathering from the south.

Ely, declaring himself for Landon and announcing that he would speak in his behalf, said that Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic presidential nominee, would deliver a speech in Boston opposing the New Deal. In New York, Smith replied that any such statement was unauthorized.

Knox on Tour

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP)—Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, set off today on a campaign swing through the nation.

His itinerary, an associate called it "the toughest ever laid out for a candidate"—embraced 70 speeches and was designed to carry him through 35 states.

His first address was scheduled for tonight at a statewide rally of party workers at Connersville, Ind. The Chicago publisher said it would deal with "recovery" and agriculture.

After spending the week-end at the guest of L. B. Rock, newspaper publisher, at Dayton, O., Col. Knox will work on new addresses at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., from August 10 to 19—except for an August 13 speech before the West Virginia state Republican convention at Huntington.

Later, after a stay at Manchester, N. H., brief talks at Massachusetts and Connecticut stations will be delivered August 31, prior to an address that night at Waterbury, Conn., and the following night at a Providence, R. I., clam bake.

Other speeches are scheduled in several New England states and Maryland.

Col. Knox will speak at Foggville, Pa., September 5 and then travel to Alma, Mich., for a Labor Day address and homecoming celebration in his honor September 7 at his Alma Mater, Alma college.

His train will then proceed to Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Colorado with a speaking itinerary to be drawn up later. He planned to stump back through the middle-west, reaching Grand Rapids for the party September 29.

C. J. Brown, national committee representative on the Knox staff who labelled the tour as the "toughest," said the candidate would travel into the east again later.

Landon's Swing

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 8 (AP)—A campaign tour of platform appearances across Nebraska and Iowa was charted by Gov. Alf M. Landon today in the fortnight preceding President Roosevelt's projected Iowa drouth conference.

The first leg of the Republican nominee's journey toward West Middlesex, Pa., was studied with stop signs. After leaving Denver August 20, he planned four platform appearances in Colorado, seven each in Nebraska and Iowa, and three in Illinois. Omaha was marked for an August 20-21 overnight stay closing in a breakfast with state leaders.

From a non-stop skirting of Chicago, the presidential nominee expected to go to West Middlesex for an August 22 speech and then on to address at Chautauque, N. Y., and Buffalo.

Coincidentally, Mr. Roosevelt planned a western dust-bowl journey including a drouth conference in Iowa to which his Republican opponent would be invited. The time was fixed for early September.

Prior to receiving a formal invitation to the meeting which would bring him face to face with his presidential foe Landon would say only that "if there is any meeting, anywhere, at any time, of benefit to Kansas, I will attend as Governor of Kansas."

Fashions and Household Hints for Women

Feminine Elegance Key-Notes Autumn Lingerie

THESE smart 1936-37 models illustrate the trend to elegance in lingerie. Pale blue satin and white lace are combined in the nightgown at left. Deep cream lace lends a luxurious touch to the fall negligee of bluish pink satin in the center. The brassiere and pantie combination is of white satin, trimmed with white lace having a pale blue satin ribbon run through the beading.

By ADELAIDE KERR

New York (AP)—A Renaissance of elegance in lingerie has swept into the fashion world with the fall mode.

Negligees and nightdresses alike reflect a "grand dame" effect which is a far cry from the "little tailored pieces" so much in vogue a few seasons ago. The flounces of the gignettes have not returned, but 1936-37 lingerie is cut on lines of slender grace which sound a decided note of femininity.

Lace Used Liberally

The empire line, reminiscent of the glamorous Empress Josephine, marks the new fall nightdresses.

molding the bust with a high waistline often accented by a soft ribbon girdle. Many nightdresses are designed with short puffed sleeves and fairly high necklines.

Lace—white, ivory and deep cream which falls just short of ecru—is used liberally in yokes, incrustations and edgings. Valenciennes, Binche and Alencon are among the favorites.

More white lingerie is being shown, and ivory and pearl shades also are smart. Tea rose, a deeper misty pink, turquoise and aquamarine likewise are reflected on the lingerie color palette, while black still holds a place in both nightdresses and daytime lingerie. Crepe satin with a soft lustrous finish is the favorite fabric, though triple georgette and very sheer crepe also are used. Several nightdresses combine two fabrics, as a satin skirt and a tucked triple georgette top.

Negligees likewise reflect the Renaissance of elegance. Among the new fall designs are house coats of heavy matelasse crepe in such tones as deep blue and red, designed with long, loose sleeves, fitted bodices and rather wide gored skirts.

Rich Colors Seen

Besides these there are crepe and crepe satin pajama suits, also in rich deep colors, combining a short-sleeved shirt top, wide trousers and a loose three-quarter length coat—all of the same material. There also are pale satin negligees with liberal lace incrustations.

With the fall mode expected to emphasize the slender waist and diaphragm, corsets follow a form fitted silhouette, which aims at a supple slowness from waist to hips.

Some models for early fall wear, designed for coolness on the last warm days, have voile fronts and elasticized backs which can stretch two ways, thus holding the figures in a firm mold and eliminating the necessity of boning. Girdles are shown with both attached and detached brassieres.

Slips to top them are cut on a princess silhouette, designed to emphasize the slender diaphragm, and finished with a molded brassiere-like top, often lace trimmed. The brassiere and pantie combination is shown for wear with sports and tailored clothes.

Disappearing Garbage Pail

How many times have you looked at your garbage tin standing on the back porch, waiting for the collector and thought it was an unsightly, but necessary evil? A garbage receiver can be built into the masonry floor of a porch, with the top, operated by a foot pedal, just above the surface. When opened, it disclosed a metal carriage can fitted into a metal shell that can be easily lifted out for emptying.

GLAZED POTS ARE HANDSOME, PRACTICAL

A tradition of the horticultural world which has recently been proved untrue concerned the porous clay flower pot, which was said to be necessary to the health of plants grown indoors.

A series of careful experiments have exploded this theory and proved that ornamental glazed pots are quite as wholesome for the plants, and in some ways better for them.

The Glazed Pot Adds Much Beauty to This Coleus Plant

Since glazed pots may be beautiful as well as practical, this discovery has proved to be good news for indoor gardeners, especially flat dwellers, whose only opportunity to grow plants is in the sunparlor or living room. Instead of pots which are unsightly and damp, requiring a cover to make them presentable, they can now grow plants in beautiful containers, which never leak, and which experts say will keep the plants in better condition in the ordinary room than the porous pot.

The use of the clay pot is so old, it is almost a legend. It had always been thought that its porous nature, which allows excess of moisture to drain off or evaporate through the sides, could not be safely changed.

Now science says this is wrong, and the glazed pot, in shiny colors and attractive designs, is fast taking the place of the old red clay type. Although it, too, is made of pottery, it is of harder substance and not porous, enabling one to set it anywhere without fear of water leaking from it.

In the glazed pot no provision is made for drainage. This might seem rank heresy to oldtime indoor gardeners, but experts agree it is best. In the greenhouse, where clay pots can be kept atop a bench of moistened soil, and where the atmosphere is sufficiently humid, the clay pot should be used. In the home, this same pot must sit in a dry situation, in dry air, thus forcing the moisture to be absorbed by the pot and then by the air. This is the advantage of the glazed pot—it needs less water, and is less messy, besides being much more handsome.

It must be remembered, however, that where glazed pots are used for long-lived house plants, there must be discrimination in watering. Over watering in this type of pot, from which the excess water has no chance to drain away, will do serious injury. The safe rule is to give your plant a good drink, when it is dry. Small novelty containers of white pottery filled with growing "green plants" are very popular this season. Small sized and Grape, Leaved, Chinese Evergreen, Negundo, and Fanciful Leaved Caladiums are available in all kinds of interesting containers including miniature animals, everything from frogs to elephants. Remember that very small containers that hold little soil dry out quite rapidly, especially during the warm weather, and require frequent attention.

One advantage of water-tight containers for plants is that a saucer is not necessary and water and soil can not wash through the drainage hole and harm the table or cloth beneath.

Linen and China Get Sea-Going Designs

By MARGERY TAYLOR.

Copyright, 1936, by McCall's Magazine for The Freeman.

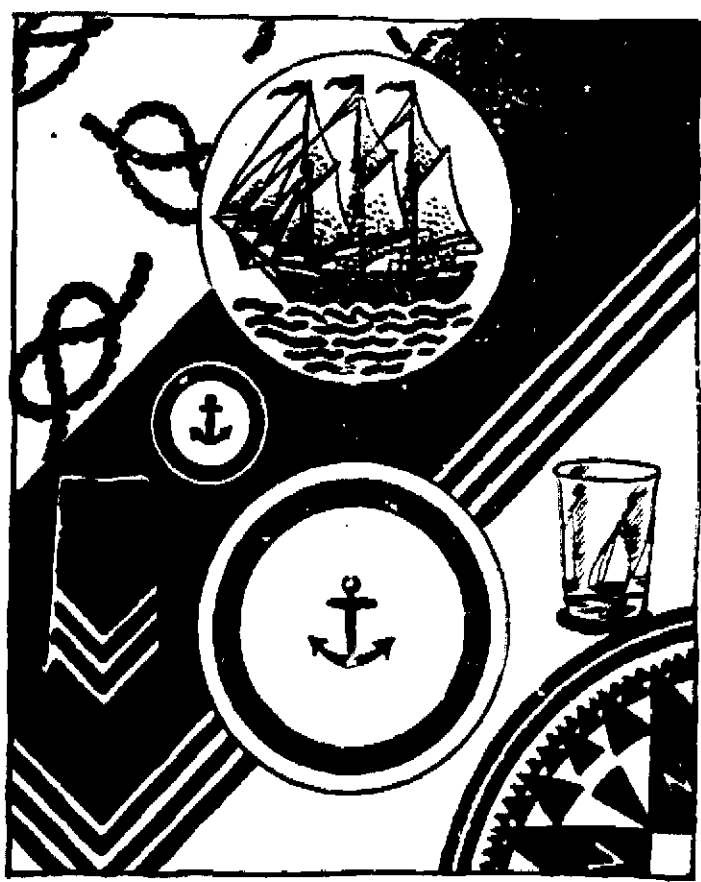

With "all at sea"—it's smart to be nautical in interior decorations these days.

Photography, rugs, wallpaper, china, glass, lamps, linens, bath mats, towels—all have sea-going designs, whether they are used in a shore bungalow or in a mid-west mansion a thousand miles from the ocean.

You don't have to know the meaning of the code flags used in some designs to enjoy their likeness. Anchors, compasses, fish and sailors' heads are other popular designs this summer.

"Compass" is an amazing ship design for linens for hot weather entertaining. It is the work of the textile designer, Marquette Morck. The "Marine Stars" is another—a luncheon cloth in red on white or blue on white, with stars excitingly arranged, and a border of flags with stars and stripes.

Guest towels in the same color-scheme come with the same design. There's a "code flag" series, "ship" and "diagonal stars". There's so gay that you'll want to do over your bath room in red, white and an anchor or sailors' knot in the and blue. For the table linens there is china. For a centerpiece, all you need is a match. Very smart are the white plates with wide blue or red border, featuring a hornpipe.

Events Around The Empire State

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who is spending the summer near here, is expected to participate in the speechmaking when this St. Lawrence river community opens its 100th birthday anniversary celebration Sunday.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—The Knickerbocker Press says that twenty-five men have been discharged by the upstate WPA for political activities. The paper says that Lester W. Herzog, upstate WPA administrator, disclosed the action in an address before a local luncheon club.

West Point, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—The Civil Service Commission had on file today the application of Miss Grace A. Harrington for reappointment as postmaster of West Point, a post she has held for the past eight years.

Miss Harrington, the third army "orphan" to hold the academy postmaster, is the daughter of Lieutenant Henry M. Harrington, a West Point graduate, who was killed with General Custer in the Little Big Horn massacre in 1876.

North Creek, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Mrs. Ellen Jeffries, 40, of Belmont, Mass., was safe at the Whispering Pine tourist camp near here today after being lost in the Adirondack woods for twenty-four hours.

Volunteer searchers found her unconscious yesterday a quarter of a mile from the camp after 100 Boy Scouts and 25 residents of the area had searched the woods for more than seven hours. Mrs. Jeffries told her rescuers she strayed away from the camp and became frightened and confused.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Raymond Wagner, 16, a ward of the Dutchess County Children's Society, lost his life while attempting to fix a dump truck near here. Medical Examiner S. A. Appel said the boy's neck was broken and his skull fractured when a team of horses moved while he was under the truck and he was struck by a protruding iron bar.

Buffalo are still hunted in the West. Though the hunt of today draws sportsmen and sportswomen from every part of the world, it is a mere echo of the old time buffalo hunt when Indians drove their mustangs among the stampeding herds and shot their arrows into the sides of as many moose as they could overtake. Like the unrestricted savages themselves, the stampeding herds have vanished into thin tradition.

Union Summer Services Continue

First Presbyterian and the First Baptist Churches continue for the balance of the vacation period in the Presbyterian edifice on Elmendorf street, the minister of that church, the Rev. Goodrich Gates, in charge. Sermons for the next five Sundays are related under the general topic of "Our Need of Religion." This Sunday "The Individual's Need of Religion" will be shown. For succeeding Sunday's the subjects are as follows: August 16—"The Church's Need of Religion"; August 23—"The City's Need of Religion"; August 30—"The Nation's Need" and September 6 (Labor Day Sunday) "The World's Need."

The choir of the church will lead in the music, its personnel composed of members of the junior and senior choir groups. Edna Merrieth is the organist and director. There will be special music each Sunday but the congregation as usual will be led in inspiring singing of well known hymns.

Father And Son To Preach Here Sunday

The Rev. Dr. Howard E. Thompson, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church in Newburgh and one of the outstanding members of the Methodist denomination, will be the guest preacher Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church. His topic will be "A Contrast in Gardens." At the morning service at 11 o'clock Dr. Thompson's son, the Rev. Howard E. Thompson, Jr., who was recently ordained, will preach on the topic "A Contrast in Characters." The Clinton Avenue Church maintains its regular schedule of services during the vacation period. Next Sunday the Rev. Dr. A. L. Faust of Brooklyn will preach.

Bert Wicheil, of the former MacDonough place on the old state road, is disposing of fresh eggs to summer residents as fast as his fine flock of leghorns can shell them out. Our city friends have a penchant for acquiring fresh milk, butter and eggs, and the amount of money collected by villagers from this source aggregates a large sum each season.

Elmer Hodel is spending two weeks with Mrs. Hodel at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Albert Carman, in Bennington.

Louis Thell, trustee of school district No. 4 and one of our old timers at handling a shotgun, recently bagged a big rat which had killed five of his ducks. "Lou" remained up two nights in succession in order to get his rat.

Although much money has been spent in various ways upon Olive roads during the past two years, the old Ridge road still remains two narrow in spots for safe passing by cars and teams. People like to use this short-cut between route 24 and the Tonche sector, but their pleasure in traversing the beautiful wooded stretch of highway not infrequently is marred by meeting another vehicle at the wrong place. In this event one of the other must back up for a distance or climb a bank at a great risk to axle and springs.

Weekly Farm Paper Review

THE BEST IDEAS FROM THE BEST FARM PAPERS

By WILLARD BOLTE

Practically all of the infectious diseases of turkeys come from chickens, according to an article by Dr. Henshaw of the University of California in Turkey World. We have known for some years that the turkey scourge of blackhead was due to raising turkeys on ground where chickens have ranged—and the pullorum disease was unknown to turkey raisers until they began to buy poulters from commercial hatcheries that were infected by diseased chicks. Fowl typhoid, fowl cholera, fowl pox and avian tuberculosis all spread from chickens to turkeys. About the only chicken disease that the turkey raiser need not fear is fowl coccidiosis—and the turkey has two private brands of coccidiosis of his own. In conclusion, the writer states that turkeys have no place on a farm where chickens are raised unless they can be kept entirely separate and on clean ground.

The head of the Nebraska pasture contest states that a lot of money was wasted this spring—as in past springs—putting grass seed in old, weedy pastures. From his extensive observation of pasture management, it is much better to plow up the old pastures—cultivate the soil to preserve moisture—and seed to grass and legumes in the fall. Grass seeded in the spring faces a battle with weeds and blistering sunshine, but if you have a spring seeding give it a chance. Clip the weeds off high as often as necessary to prevent them from going to seed—and go easy on pasturing it.—Nebraska Farmer.

A milking machine will pay its way, under ordinary conditions, with a herd of 8 to 10 good dairy cows in good production. In fact, where the milking is now done indifferently and at irregular hours a machine could easily pay for itself with half a dozen cows. The general rule, however, is that where cows are being properly milked by hand it will take a herd of at least 15 producing cows to show a profit on the investment required for a pipe line type of milking machine.—Southern Agriculturist.

Prof. R. L. Cook of Michigan State College writes that a great majority of the fertilizer drills on Michigan farms are rendered unfit for satisfactory use—because the owners fail to remove the residue of fertilizer from the drill when they are through using it. This old fertilizer gathers moisture. It corrodes and rusts the metal parts. And it often cakes so hard that nothing less than a cold chisel will remove it. All of these difficulties can be avoided by tilting the drill until the tongue points straight up and brushing all fertilizer out with a whisk broom. To prevent rusting during the winter, the metal parts should be dismantled—thoroughly cleaned with a wire brush—and coated with heavy oil before putting the drill away for the winter.—Michigan Farmer.

It is a mistake to take the grain away from dairy calves when you stop feeding them milk, according to one of the editors of Kansas Farmer. A good rule to follow is to feed all the roughage they will eat—plus one-half pound of grain per day for each 100 pounds of body weight. If they are fed legume hay for roughage, oats alone will make a fairly good grain supplement—equal parts of oats and corn is better—and three parts of corn to one part of bran, by weight, is very satisfactory. The grain should be kept up until the heifer is twelve months old if you want a well-grown and profitable cow.

Missouri College of Agriculture reports that—in territory where it does not winter-kill—winter barley is superior to wheat as fall pasture and a nurse crop—equal to wheat as a cover crop—and can be counted on to produce more actual grain feed than can be secured from corn on more than one-half of the 4 to 5 million acres of corn land that is planted each year in Missouri. On land where corn is marginal—and red clover or alfalfa cannot be grown without expensive soil conditioning—a thoroughly practical rotation is soybeans, winter barley, and Korean lespedeza. Under this plan the soybeans replace the corn in its regular position and are cut for legume hay sometime in August. By the middle of September—long before wheat would be safe from Hessian fly—the winter barley is seeded and it furnishes pasture that fall and winter and a crop of grain to replace corn the following spring. In this rotation winter barley does away with corn, wheat and oats. It makes an excellent nurse crop for lespedeza, which comes along rapidly as soon as the barley crop is removed and provides pasture that is far superior to bluegrass from the middle of June until early October—at which time it will start to mature a crop of seed. By the time lespedeza has been sown twice on all fields used in this rotation, the surface soil should contain sufficient seed to start a heavy volunteer crop of lespedeza each time any field is seeded to barley.—Capper's Farmer.

In breeding for higher milk production, many herd owners spend a great deal of thought and money on the sire and tend to overlook the importance of concentrating the blood of their most outstanding and prepotent cows. Some of the finest producing herds in the country are descended from one remarkable cow, and the University of Illinois strongly advises members of the Dairy Herd Improvement Association to build their future herds as carefully from the female side as from the male side.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Soft pork is rapidly becoming a serious problem with packers who depend upon hogs from southern counties in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. For one period not far back the Cincinnati packers refused to accept hogs on any basis except a slaughter test—and certain Eastern packers are considering changing their source of supply from Ohio to states farther west for the same reason. Feeding whole soybeans is perhaps the chief reason for this epidemic of soft pork, but hog feeders should remember that excessive green feed, soft corn, and any supplement containing large quantities of oil can cause this trouble. The packers cannot afford to absorb the loss, and if the volume of soft pork continues to increase this writer looks for drastic action to penalize hog shipments that are not up to market standards.—Ohio Farmer.

Kiwanis Men Visit Camp Preumaker

Camp Preumaker, Aug. 7.—Members of the Kingston Kiwanis Club were guests Thursday night of the boys who are spending the summer at Camp Preumaker, the Y. M. C. A. camp at Glenora, for a week's life in the out-of-doors.

In the softball game which featured the early part of the evening's program, the visitors succumbed to their campers by the score of 19-5.

A number of the men visited the camp's new nature trail, just completed by campers and leaders under the direction of H. B. Stein and Wallace Buley, members of the camp staff. The trail, covering the outskirts of the camp along the north and east boundaries, contains 84 identification signs for 31 different species of trees and shrubs and 49 species of weeds, flowering plants and ferns. The completed project indicates many days' work on the part of those in charge, which will be resumed for the improvement of the trail at the beginning of the next camp season.

Featured on the campfire program were a harmonica and Jew's harp duet by Stanley Krom and Vincent Countryman, and a voice-orchestration by Peter Mancuso. Winner of the lasting contest, with various wild specimens of nature identified with the contestants blindfolded, was Stanley Krom of cabin one. At the close of the campfire Roger Loughran, president of the Kiwanis Club, spoke to the boys briefly on the club's pleasure in sending them and the boys' evident interest in camp life.

Boys who swam the creek the first two days of the camp, thereby earning the boating privilege, were: John Bailey, Vernon Besemer, Theodore Barton, Robert Brown, Frank Bunce, Frank Cereola, John Donnelly, Norman Dunbar, LeGrand Gue, Kenneth Glass, William Hughes, Dewey Hornbeck, Thomas Krum, Walter Krum, Peter Mancuso, Charles Miller, Ralph Miller, William Mills, Andrew Norton, Virgil Olsen, Peter Short, George Siskles, Edward Sottile, Vernon Van Euten, Alfred Wolven and Merrill Yapple.

The forty-one boys whom the Kiwanis Club is sponsoring are:

A Letter to Posterity

Rosendale, August 7, 1936

This being the writer's 87th birthday, his thoughts naturally turn backward to his youth, and one by one to the many milestones he has passed, and to memories of the many many fellow travelers who have come and gone. It seems to be the especial province of old codgers, who have escaped killing and outlived their usefulness, to advise and instruct the rising generation as to how they did it. These fantastic old veterans, however, seldom agree, and the writer unlikely never having been a prodigy of prudence, cannot indulge in the smug satisfaction of holding up his life as an example to others, and unfortunately can add nothing to our present stock of information on that point, except perhaps that he has never thought a thing was unfulfilled, because it happened to be pleasant, or that God delighted in seeing people unhappy, or even that there was any special virtue in the self-denial attendant upon doing without certain pleasant accustomed things. He has made moderate use of tobacco all his life, and must confess, with some reluctance, that he has maintained a sort of desultory back door friendship with that unrepentable old rascal, John Harlequin, and even now although somewhat warped and knee-crumpling, thankful for the gift of life, still clings fast to the transitory joys of this good old world, none the less, perhaps, because of his somewhat doubtful prospect of a better.

Born in the spinning wheel and tallow candle age, he has grown old in a world which has no place for old men, and so like Gloster "Hats no delight to pass away the time, unless to spy his shadow in the sun and desert on his own infirmities." However, as the schools have recently poured forth their flood of new life to mingle with the old stream, and as the writer has a lively recollection of the time when he too emerged, filled with the same hopes and aspirations, he would like to call the prevailing youngster's attention to some of the changes which have transpired.

In the advance and development of civilization, and to the wonderful achievements of concrete thought, constantly seeking the truth and striving for its application, during the lifetime of one man. And saying this, leave the inquiring mind to go backward no further than the middle of the nineteenth century to come suddenly upon a world that has passed away. To be sure he will find some things, like the sermon on the mount, which are for all time, but he will find that within that period a few great minds have revolutionized the social and industrial world, and if he diligently studies the history of the past eighty years, he will no longer dwell with regret upon the good old times, when his ancestors scalped Indians and lived on hog and hominy, but more highly appreciate and value the noble heritage to which he has been born.

When he looks backward still further, even to the earliest record of his kind, although here and there he will find great lights shining in the midst of ignorance, superstition and barbarism, perhaps, upon the whole, he will reach the conclusion that the period in the history of the world has been so favorable to the common man as this year of 1936, 1936 and standing on the state ground, the undoubted heir of all the past, and present hope of all to come, earnestly resolve to worthily play his part in the great drama of human destiny.

The earliest profound impression made upon the writer's mind was when he stood an understanding witness at the celebration which followed the laying of the first Atlantic cable, and listened spellbound to a speech delivered by Cyrus W. Field, the projector and controlling mind of this great enterprise. Mr. Field after describing the cable told his audience that all that was then known of this strange under-sea force, the cable, the only one at that time was considered as a somewhat doubtful experiment.

For the writer has lived to see the same enterprise, the cable, which brought the world closer together, and land across the water.

ous wheels of industry, flash intelligence to the most remote corner of the habitable globe, turn darkness into light and while curling my lady's hair, murmur in her ear some sweet old song, or howl a modern fantasy.

High above the great desert he has lived to look down from the cockpit of an air ship on the tomb of Cheops the glorious, and upon the serene inscrutable brooding face of the great Sphinx.

He might mention the internal combustion engine which made the airship possible, but it would be quite impossible to enumerate all that the fertile brain of man has achieved during the last eighty years, or reflecting upon his past exploits predict what this wonder and glory of the universe will accomplish in the future. Perhaps he may at sometime penetrate to where nature seems to carry on her secret silent processes of healing and of birth, and when his soul is clearer and his eyes clearer, some day come suddenly upon the great mother unawares at her eternal re-creating work.

The writer well remembers his distress, at the close of the Civil War, on being told that our country was more than three billions of dollars in debt, and though shocked at the immensity of this great obligation still hoped to live to see it extinguished; unfortunately in this matter his aspirations have received a considerable setback. He has also lived to see with sincere regret a decline in that brave old spirit of self-sustaining manhood, and a somewhat too willing reliance for support upon the industry and prudence of others.

On the whole his life and experience has been that of the ordinary man of his generation: Joy and sorrow, triumph and defeat. Sometimes he has caught a gleam as far off of those sources of the deeper and more enduring satisfactions of life, and though owing to his ignorance and incompleteness he has missed them, they are here. He has had hours of almost perfect happiness, has held to his throbbing hopeless breast the dying head of the one he loved, and stood by many graves. And now at last, drawing to a close, is sustained by the faint hope that all is not lost, that perhaps in some obscure way he too may leave a world that has been so sweet and good to him, a little better for his having lived in it. And so passes, thankful for the blessing of a long and happy life, and thankful too for that fortitude which enables one to contemplate the end with equanimity.

City Baseball League Will Play Three Exhibition Games Next Week

With two crack squads assembled on the basis of official batting and pitching averages, the City League will present three post-season exhibitions next week at the Athletic Field. Games will be staged on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Jack Robins and Babe Volker, two veteran baseball figures, will handle the squads. The teams will be known as Team A and Team B.

Thirty men in all were selected. Each squad consists of five pitchers, two catchers, the infield and four outfielders. Past performances were disregarded in the making of the squads and the official batting averages compiled by Secretary Charles Tiano were used as the sole basis.

In the pitching department, the material was divided as evenly as possible. Joe Brown and Jack Dodge were the leading pitchers. Brown, with eight wins and one defeat was made the No. 1 for the A squad. Dodge, with a record of six wins and two losses, automatically became No. 1 man for the B squad.

The lineups:

A Squad

All players are requested to report to their respective coaches at 7 p. m. Tuesday in order that the team can be assembled and the game started on time.

Parker And Mangin Gain Final Round

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Frank Parker, Davis Cup hopeful from Spring Lake, N. J., and Milton Mangin, faced the final hurdles today in the Meadow Club's invitation tennis tournament.

Seeking his fourth straight singles title, he opposed Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., in the finals of the individual play.

Then he and Mangin were to team up to engage the national clay court champions, Bobby Riggs and Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, in an effort to retain their doubles crown. Parker reached the singles finals yesterday with the most impressive win he has ever shown in the Meadow Club competition. Forcing Eugene Smith of Berkeley, Calif., to keep to his backcourt almost entirely, he ran out a straight set victory, dropping but six games in the three sets.

Mangin was forced to five sets to overcome the chop-stroke artistry of Art Hendrix of Lakeland, Fla. In the doubles, the Parker-Mangin duo lost only one set in eliminating John McFarland of Fort Worth and Hal Surface of Waldo, Mo. Riggs and Sabin went to five sets before losing out to Sidney Wood and J. Gilbert Hall.

Socialist Meetings Scheduled Here

Two open air meetings are scheduled for next week at the corner of Broadway and O'Neil street, one Monday at 8 p. m. when Alfred W. Teichert of Philadelphia, Pa., will speak on "The Socialist Labor Party Program," and the other Tuesday at 7 p. m. when Winston Daniels of the Socialist Party will discourse on "Fascism and Socialism."

Mr. Teichert, Monday's speaker, is the national organizer of the Socialist Labor Party, and Mr. Daniels, Tuesday's orator, is chairman of the Socialist Youth Committee and a member of the state executive committee of the Socialist party.

In addition to the speech of Mr. Teichert, Tuesday, C. E. Miller of Poughkeepsie will talk.

Ellenville Girl Wins Scholarship

The Rosa Dolan of 5 Center street, Ellenville, is listed among the winners of special state scholarships awarded for the children of World War veterans who died in service. According to an announcement by the State Education Department, the winners were selected as a result of competitive examinations held June 17-19. Miss Dolan was the only female from this section on the preliminary list of winners given out.

The scholarships entitle the winners to $200 a year for the next four years to meet expenses in any approved college, university or normal school of their selection that is located in New York state.

LOVELOCK WINS OLYMPIC 1,500 METERS

Jack Lovelock, New Zealand medical student, is shown in this picture, transmitted directly from Berlin to New York, as he won the 1,500-meter run in the Olympics and set a new world record of 3 minutes and 47.8 seconds. Glenn Cunningham of Lawrence, Kas., was second, only eight feet behind Lovelock, and Phil Edwards, Canadian negro star, placed third. (Associated Press Photo)

Kingston Colonials All Set For Newburgh Recreations Sunday

Accompanied by a large number of fans, the Kingston Colonials will invade Newburgh Sunday for a crack at Big Bill Shay's fast stepping Recreation outfit. The game starts at 3 p. m.

King Kong Shackett, ace of the Colonial staff, will start for the locals with Joe Hoffman catching. Newburgh has a pair of formidable moundsmen in Jim Taylor and Les Seaman. The latter, a veteran fast ball artist, is likely to get the call. Tony Quint, N. Y. U. varsity catcher, will get the call for Newburgh.

The Recreation have one of the finest semi-pro clubs in the state and the Colonials will have to be in top form to provide suitable opposition. Big Bill, a former Kingston favorite, experimented for two years before he assembled a suitable lineup.

The Colonials will use their regular infield of Carpenter, 1b; Kehler, 2b; Burgevin, 3b; and Turk, ss. Knight, Lay, C. Tiano, M. Tiano and Freleigh will perform in the outfield. The reserve pitchers are Dewey Van Duren, Johnny Cullen and Frankie Bruno.

Yesterday's Results

Fullers made it seven straight last night when they routed Montgomery Ward by 18-5 at Block Park. Zoller featured for the winners with two home runs, while Demski, Marks and Fatum connected for one each. Marks was on the mound for Fullers and pitched against Cherney.

Central Hudson, using only eight men, defeated the DeMolays at Barnmans by the one sided count of 18-3. Ray Gadd held the losers hitless until the fifth. Zucca and Short rapped out homers for the winners.

The Board of Public Works smashed Pieper for 12 hits in winning over the Telcos at Hasbrouck Park by 11-3. Jim Norton held the losers to seven bingles.

The Arcanums defeated the Canfields by 20-14 in a free swinging game at the Armory diamond. Kelly and Reis hit homers.

Class 1 railroads of the United States for the first six months of 1936 had a net railway operating income of $238,243,934, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.22 per cent on their property investment.

Home Leaders At St. Remy Tomorrow

Tomorrow, on their home diamond, Manager Sam Barnett's St. Remy nine will be battling to keep their string of unbroken victories intact, but know that they must do some fast stepping to do it, when they face the Grunenwald "Home Leaders."

The Leaders have played some of the best semi-pro teams in Ulster and adjoining counties, and take pride in that they have won 22 games and lost but 9 this season. Manager Barnett asks the fans to be on hand tomorrow to cheer the home boys on to victory.

For St. Remy, "Skimpy" Komosa will send his fast ball over the plate while the "Home Leaders" will send their star performer, Ed Scherer, with his bag of tricks, to the mound. "Don" Kelly will be behind the plate. The game is scheduled for 2:30.

Ctiy League Series Opens August 19

The managers of the City Baseball League met last evening and it was announced that the city baseball league will hold its championship series starting on August 19. The Kaslich A. C. winners of the first half, will clash with the Berard A. C. winners of the second half, in a series of seven games.

The games will be played on Wednesday and Friday nights until one team has won four games. Games will start at 6 o'clock. It was voted for the first time in the history of the City League not to hold any of the games on a Saturday. Twilight encounters have proved to be more popular with the fans.

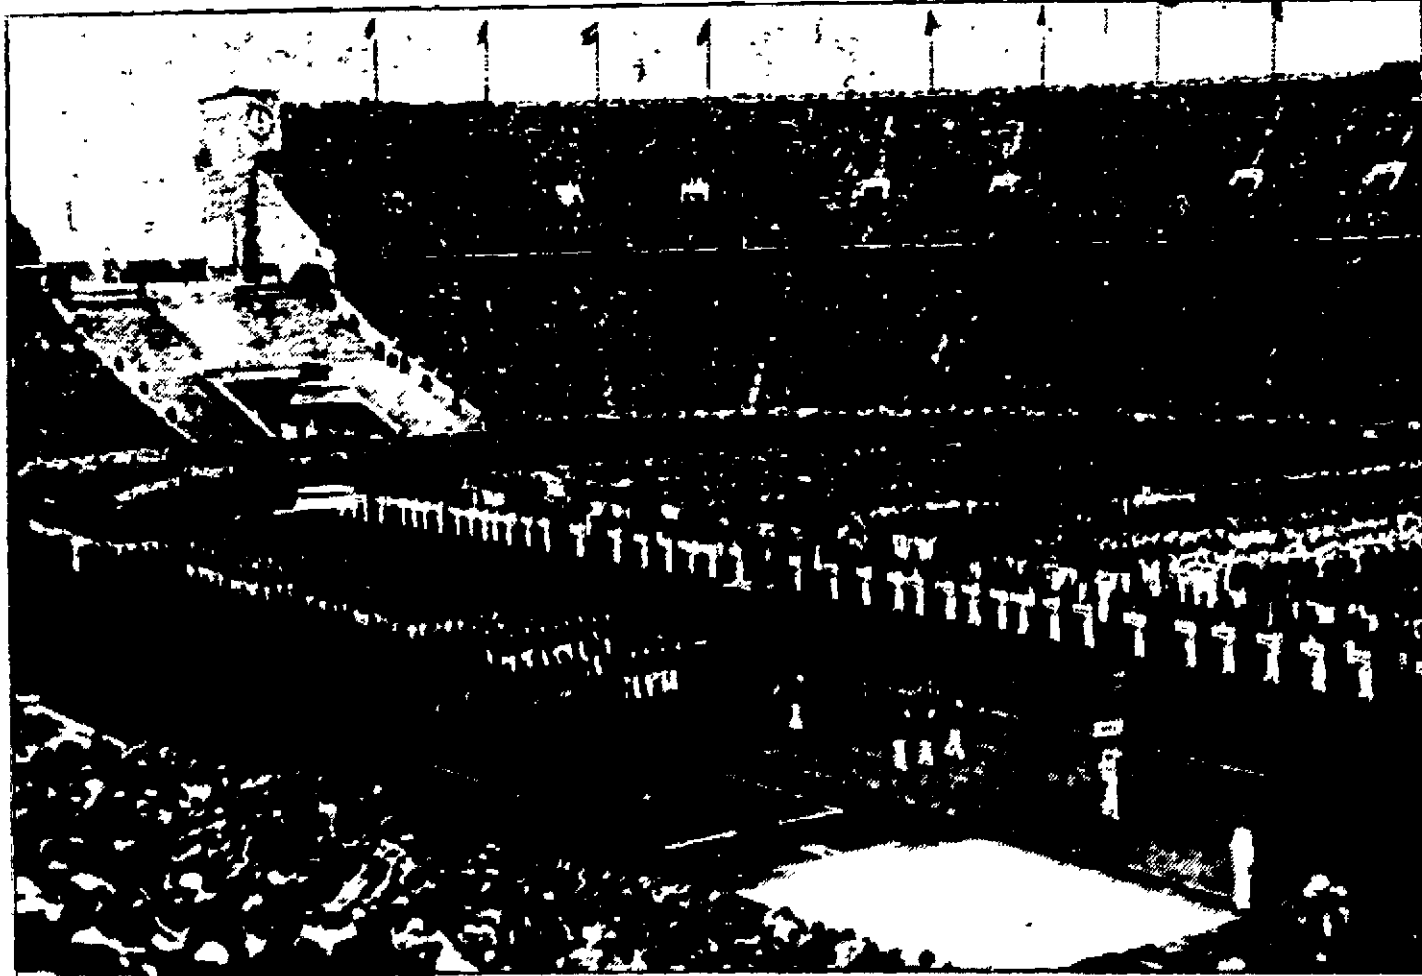

The softball-baseball mixed game between the Hedricks and Apple Knockers has been called off but the Kaslichs and Chevies will play as announced, on Monday night.

promises to go hard for the Americans.

Adolph Kiefer, Chicago, holder of virtually every back-stroke record, was considered the only certain winner on the men's team. In the absence of Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, such a capable observer as Dutch Smith, coach of the German team, was predicting that American women wouldn't place in a single race, much less win.

Mrs. Dorothy Paynton hill of Los Angeles was conceded a bright chance to capture the Platform diving title but that, said the experts, would be the American crop.

U. S. OLYMPIC TEAM PARADES BEFORE THOUSANDS

While thousands of cheering spectators greeted them with the Nazi salute, and members of teams from other nations stood at attention in the center of the huge arena, officials and team members of the United States Olympic squad marched around the 400-meter track in the great stadium in the ceremony opening the eleventh Olympiad. The Americans, carrying streamers over their heads, gave an 'eyes right' salute when they passed the reviewing stand containing Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and other German high officials. Giants Fire 15 Hit Assault at 3 Phillie Hurlers For 9-3 Decision

By the Associated Press
Managers Charley Grimm and Charley Drossen have a right to sing the blues today.

When every first-string man is needed for the stretch drives from here in, one of the most dependable of Grimm's Cubs and one of the same of Drossen's Reds are hospital cases. The tough luck that sent Gabby Hartnett and Bill Myers to the hospital, is going to go a long way toward sending with them the once-glowing hopes of the Cubs for another National League pennant, and the Reds for a five division berth for the first time in years.

Hartnett will be out of the lineup for several days with a foot injury. A foul tip from pitcher George Earnshaw's bat did the damage yesterday, more than wiping out the pleasure of a 14-5 victory over the Cardinals, which cut the gas house gang's league lead to two games. Myers, shortstop sparkplug of the "kid team" that was rocketing along only a few weeks ago, is gone for the season. An intestinal operation will keep him out of action until 1937.

The Reds were little better than pushovers yesterday as the Pirates took both ends of a doubleheader, 3-1 and 1-0, behind the top-flight hurling of Red Lucas, who allowed but five hits in the opener, and Cy Blanton, who gave up six in the nightcap.

Grimm has young Ken O'Dea to fill in for Hartnett, while Drossen is calling upon the aging Tommy Thoenow. But O'Dea doesn't have the ability of Hartnett to handle the high-priced Cub pitching corps with the stretch heat on.

The Cubs-Cards and Red-Pirates clashes were part of a considerably curtailed program in the majors yesterday.

Giants Win.

The Giants fired a 15-hit assault at three Phillie pitchers for a 9-3 decision, their fifth straight and their 18th in 22 starts, to gain ground on the leaders.

The Cleveland Indians saved their second place grip in the American League with an 8-1 win over the White Sox behind Denny Galehouse's seven-hit pitching, while the Senators nosed out the Red Sox 3-2 in ten innings, despite Jimmy Fox's 32nd homer of the year.

All was quiet on the rest of the big league front. The Yanks, Browns, Tigers and Athletics were idle in the American League, while the Dodgers and Bees took a day off in the National.

Highland Board Inspects District

Highland, Aug. 8.—A day's session of the Town Board was held Thursday in the Town Hall with Mr. Petrosi, head of the company that installed the sewer last year, with Messrs. French and Womner of the London Lancashire Indemnity Company also present. The men accompanied by Elmer Randall, who had been employed by the sewer construction company, made a tour of the sewer district earlier in the day. There have been too many unfinished bits of the sewer and since they have not been completed the board has requested the bonding company to do it. There were many discussions and conferences among the officials of the company and the board during the day. Edward Akeley, sewer inspector, was present and gave a report of his work.

Since payment of sewer bonds must be made the board members have worked out a plan of assessment which is completed and the roll may be seen in the town hall, beginning Friday, August 7. It will remain there for two weeks. At the end of that time the Town Board will meet in the hall August 22, at 10 o'clock in the morning to meet any taxpayers and hear their grievances. Notices are already posted announcing the date.

Charles L. Dullio was to be interviewed as to the town tenting the building at the lower corner, formerly occupied by his father as a store, for a polling place for the newly constructed election district, No. 4. Frank Scavilla, of the Mid-Hudson Hotel at the river, complained of the odor from the brook which runs at the rear of the hotel. This arises from the overflow coming from the disposal plant. At this time of the year when the water supply is low there is so little current carry off stagnant water that lies in the pools in the brook.

To the many uses of salt must be added another, that of road making. The use of salt in highway building is a Canadian idea which is being widely adopted in other countries. Experiments were originally made in Nova Scotia, following which laboratory work was carried out by the National Research Council of Canada and by McGill University, and subsequently the matter was taken up in the United States. During the past three years, considerable mileage of salt-established roads have been laid in the province of Ontario and Quebec, as well as in the United States.

SKUNK SEIZES RABBIT. LOCAL BUSINESS MAN AROUSED

Squalls of terror, which apparently had their source on the property of a neighbor some distance away, aroused a John street business man from peaceful slumber Wednesday night at his camp at West Shokan. He visioned nothing less than first degree assault and was preparing to go to the rescue, when the commotion died down and he decided that his help was not needed after all.

The next day the explanation was forthcoming. A skunk had seized a pot rabbit which had been running about the yard and it was the cries of the frightened bunny that had disturbed the midnight air. The lady of the house, without wasting any unnecessary time went to the rescue of her pet, but when she picked him up Mr. Skunk still held on. She called to her husband, but about the time he appeared on the scene the house dog had joined the rescue squad and made short work of the marauder.

Once Fashion to Carry One's Knives and Forks

The fine craftsmanship, the wealth of detail in ornament and the wide variety of material employed in the handles (hafts) of antique knives and forks is attributable to the fact that these were personal possessions, and much prized ones. Italian influence in England was supposed to be responsible for the introduction of the fork, which was rarely used there, even in the highest circles, until well along towards the middle of the Seventeenth century. A guest would bring his own set, knife, fork and spoon, to a dinner, even as late as the close of the century.

Travelers stopping at inns found these sets an absolute necessity, and they were kept in a case in a pocket. In order to make carrying easier, they were very frequently of the folding type. Sometimes only knife and fork made up the set, each with one side shaped and one side flat, called "twins."

Fine polished brass, sometimes enriched with enamel, or ivory, amber, porcelain, pottery, rare wood, tortoiseshell, mother-of-pearl, silver or gold, are among the materials which formed the handles of this early cutlery. The blades were sometimes elaborately engraved with motifs, coats of arms, figures of saints and other ornamentation. Iron, damascened in gold and silver, was used for the handle of some early German sets, and from the same country came a set now in a museum with jeweled silver handles.—New York Sun.
